In just a few seconds, cryptograms are generated to protect the user’s data, and risk management assessments and security checks take place, as shown.

The transaction has been approved to protect the user’s data, and risk management assessments and security checks take place, as shown. The transaction has been approved, guaranteeing the merchant will be paid. The customer walks away happy with their item. The clearing payment now takes place and will appear on their next bank statement.